APPLICATION: Asylum, withholding of removal, Convention Against Torture

ORDER:

PER CURIAM. This case is before us on remand from the United States Court of Appeals for (b) (6) v. Gonzales (b) (6). In a decision dated February 25, 2003, this Board affirmed without opinion an Immigration Judge's decision denying the respondent's applications for asylum and withholding of removal, and the Board also denied a motion to remand to permit the respondent to submit an application for protection under the Convention Against Torture.

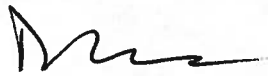

In its decision, the (b) (6) found that the Immigration Judge's adverse credibility determination was not supported by substantial evidence, and remanded for a determination of whether the respondent was arrested because of terrorist activities or his imputed political beliefs. The court determined that the Immigration Judge's brief discussion of the implausibility of the respondent's testimony on this question was inadequate.

Given these findings, a remand is necessary so the Immigration Judge can address the issue of whether the respondent was arrested in part because of an imputed political opinion. If the Immigration Judge finds nexus, then past persecution has been shown as the respondent testified to considerable beatings. The respondent is entitled to a presumption of future persecution, and the burden of proof is on the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) to rebut the presumption.

(b) (6)

8 C.F.R. § 1208.13(b)(1)(ii). Given the age of the record, the Immigration Judge should permit the parties to submit evidence regarding whether there has been a fundamental change of circumstances in India such that the respondent no longer has a well-founded fear of persecution there. 8 C.F.R. § 1208.13(b)(1)(i)(A).

The (b) (6) affirmed the Board's determination that the respondent did not present prima facie evidence of his eligibility for protection under the Convention Against Torture. (b) (6) (b) (6) Remand is therefore limited to the respondent's applications for asylum and withholding of removal. Accordingly, the February 25, 2003, decision of the Board in this case is vacated as to the respondent's applications for asylum and withholding of removal and the record is remanded to the Immigration Judge for further proceedings consistent with this decision and the decision of the court.
